

The "Shamir Salads" Company is giving notice of a recall of products it manufactures.

Within the framework of the routine quality control checks conducted by the company in its factories, it was discovered that several products were suspected of the presence of the bacterium listeria monocytogenes, these products were blocked prior to being marketed and were not placed on sale.

The listeria monocytogenes bacterium is liable to causes illness in the high risk population, such as persons with a weakened immune system, the elderly, or cause miscarriages in pregnant women.

Further checks conducted by the company on other products of manufactured on the same days turned out to be normal.

As a working procedure the Shamir Company does not put products on the market until the company has obtained the all clear for the products from an external laboratory and this was also the case in this instance.

Nevertheless, as a responsible company, the "Shamir Salads" Company has decided to recall several products from the market since they were manufactured on the same days when the suspicion of the presence of the bacterium listeria monocytogenes arose in the products that were blocked.
